SAINTS COSMAS and DAMIAN
 September 27

DOCTORS AND mission dispensaries have special patrons in Cosmas and Damian, brothers who practiced medicine in Syria in the closing years of the third century. They were called in the east "the moneyless ones," because they cared for their patients free of charge. Devout lovers of Jesus, they were even more solicitous for the souls than for the bodies of those they tended. The apostolic brother-physicians converted many sinners and exorcised the possessed. They were given the grace of martyrdom during the persecution of Emperor Diocletian.

The school is in need of substitute teachers, who would be used periodically throughout the year when one of the usual teachers is unable to make it in. No commitment to certain days or times is necessary - names would simply be added to a list and will be called when needed.
